Millennial Leaders Development Online Program

Harnessing and Preparing the Value-Based Millennial Leaders for the 21st Century

OVERVIEW

The growing generation of Millennial Leaders is going to make the workplace more human value-oriented in the 21st Century. They will soon comprise majority of senior leaders and general managers of many businesses and corporations, and the implications will be transformative as these leaders will influence the working environment to give more importance to social impact, meaningful work, and a purpose-driven culture. Millennial Leaders in the 21st Century will also foster a balanced power structure, supporting workplaces that give importance to fairness, integrity, openness, teamwork, and empathy aligned with their personal brand. They will create a flexible, diverse, and inclusive environment, promote a growth mindset culture, and harness the power of open communication, collaboration, coaching, and feedback in the workplace.

Many young leaders, however, admit that they feel ill-prepared to lead effectively. The Millennial Leadership competency gaps include business acumen, executive presence, personal leadership brand and communication, self-mastery, and managing and balancing business goals while juggling a workplace full of different generations, all with their own set of wants and needs.
