Career Accelerator Program

Building a solid career track for new graduates and early career professionals

Putting in the hard work and proving yourself in your first entry-level role is crucial in building one's career. Establishing a solid career track may seem challenging given the intense work competitive environment. It definitely can be, but what's really hard is taking charge, demonstrating leadership, making the most of a job role, and turning it into something valuable to the company, as well as professionally fulfilling and personally rewarding for oneself.

So, are you excited and ready to get hands-on, apply what you've learned from school, and make a difference in your dream job and organization? Do you know where, when, and how to start your career in a very competitive work environment? Can you see yourself jumpstarting and accelerating a professional career in some of the world's largest or most prominent local companies? Do you want to work with the experts to get the best out of yourself and your career?

Completing a degree is one of the critical factors that jumpstart a career for most new graduates and early career professionals. And getting a good job is a natural goal for most fresh graduates after acquiring technical skills and academic knowledge while in college. However, getting a degree doesn't automatically mean a guaranteed good career track. And most young professionals experience many career missteps because of so much trial and error in their career decisions.

The AIM Career Accelerator Program is specifically designed for fresh graduates or early career professionals to build their own tailor-fit experience as they enter the corporate world by discovering themselves more fully, establishing knowledge about working culture and team dynamics, and preparing an action plan focusing on individual, professional, and career development. Building knowledge about corporate environment, networking experience, confidence, connections, coaching and guidance, and preparing an intentional career strategy are excellent ways to jumpstart and accelerate your career, whether you're a new graduate or an early career professional.

When you're ready to make the first move in your professional life, there is no better place to start than with the Career Accelerator program from the Asian pioneer in international management education and one of the top business schools in the region. This program is an immersive ten-half-day program designed for fresh graduates and early career professionals who want to advance and accelerate their career development and gain targeted skills and experience from successful executives, professionals, and career coaches. You will learn from industry and company leaders at the forefront of the talent industry. Through the program, you will discover yourself better, learn how employers hire and develop top talent, discover successful strategies to accelerate your career in your chosen field, be coached by an experienced career professional, and position yourself as a hireable good talent for any organization. Participants who complete the program will have the edge over their competition in their future job search process from start to finish.

All participants will each receive individualized and engaging coaching sessions with certified ICF coaches leveraging the person's capabilities, personality, values, strengths, passions, and aspirations.
